

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	9
Introduction	11
CHAPTER ONE
The Patriotic Dreams of a Friend of Mankind	21
1. Introduction	23
2. The failings of modern commercial politics	28
2.1. The Hobbesian foundations of 'Afterpolitik'	28
2.2. Luxury and civility	35
3. The radical critique of modern society: Beat Ludwig von Muralt and Jean-Jacques Rousseau	42
3.1. Beat Ludwig von Muralt's radical Pietism	46
3.2. Iselin's critique of Muralt: from 'instinct divin' to moral sense	56
3.3. Rousseau: the origins of the arts and sciences in inequality ...	65
3.4. Iselin and Rousseau in Paris: from Socrates to Diogenes	76
4. The restoration of natural order	85
4.1. Iselin's ideal of early patriarchal society	85
4.2. Order and love	89
4.3. Order and wealth	92
4.4. The difficulties of reform	94
CHAPTER TWO
Iselin and the Swiss Debate on Economic Patriotism	103
1. Introduction	105
2. The Economic Society and the critique of aristocratic Berne	121

2.1. The political and economic critique of Bernese Welfarism . . .	121
2.2. The Economic Society's critique of 'faux civisme'	129
2.3. The Economic Society and the European debate on monarchical patriotism	137
3. The Patriotic Society and the defence of republican honour	146
3.1. The republican critique of monarchical patriotism	146
3.2. The 'Patriotic Society': republican honour and public opinion	151
3.3. Iselin; republican honour and the impartial spectator	162
CHAPTER THREE
Iselin's Critique of Rousseau's Second Discourse	173
1. Introduction	175
2. Rousseau's critique of modern patriotism	180
2.1. The Bernese reception of Rousseau	180
2.2. Rousseau's critique of the Patriotic Society	185
2.3. Rousseau's defence of aristocratic Berne	192
3. The Bernese response to Rousseau	196
3.1. Rousseau and moral sentiment	197
3.2. Iselin's critique of the Bernese Rousseauists	201
3.3. Two ways to refute utilitarianism	204
4. Rousseau's critique of sociability and the derivation of justice from the natural instinct of pity	207
4.1. Rousseau against the moderns	207
4.2. Rousseau's critique of Pufendorf	211
4.3. The principle of pity	218
5. Pleasure and pain	222
5.1. Rousseau and Mandeville	222
5.2. Pity cannot be used as the foundation of natural sociability . . .	226
5.3. Against the hypothetical state of nature	228
5.4. History versus hypothesis	231
5.5. The active soul	233
5.6. Pity does not establish regulative behaviour	240
5.7. Pain and pleasure	242

CHAPTER FOUR

The History of Mankind	247
1. Introduction	249
2. From Contrat Social to Ordre Social	256
3. Nature and self-determination	264
3.1. Nature's plan for man is only accomplished in the entire species	265
3.2. The History of Mankind as the history of the human mind	269
3.3. Freedom as the mastering of nature	274
4. The realisation of freedom through 'sociability' and 'unsociability'	278
4.1. Republican monarchy	278
4.2. The Oriental model of sociability	283
4.3. The Northern model of unsociability	286
5. The rise of modern liberty in the West	291
5.1. Iselin's critique of Montesquieu's model of a non-virtuous monarchy	295
5.2. The rise of real freedom in England	300
Conclusion	305
Bibliography	315
Index	337