

Contents

Citation Information	ix
Notes on Contributors	xi
Preface
Bob Franklin	1
1. Introduction: The press and popular culture in interwar Europe
Sarah Newman and Matt Houlbrook	2
2. “An Organ of Uplift?”: The popular press and political culture in interwar Britain
Adrian Bingham	13
3. Press Advertising and Fascist Dictates: Showcasing the female consumer in Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany
Bianca Gaudenzi	25
4. The Political Cartoon as Educationalist Journalism: David Low’s portrayal of mass unemployment in interwar Britain
Mark Hampton	43
5. Gentleman, Journalist, Gentleman-Journalist: Gossip columnists and the professionalisation of journalism in interwar Britain
Sarah Newman	60
6. Fashion for All?: The transatlantic fashion business and the development of a popular press culture during the interwar period
Véronique Pouillard	78
7. The Creation of European News: News agency cooperation in interwar Europe
Heidi Tworek	92
8. Crowds, Culture and Power: Mass politics and the press in interwar France
Jessica Wardhaugh	105
9. “You Will Find Germany in Peace and Order”: Edward Meeman, an American journalist who praised and condemned Nazi Germany
Dale Zacher	121
Index	133