

Contents

List of Contributors	ix
Acknowledgments	xiii

Introduction	1
László Kontler, Antonella Romano, Silvia Sebastiani, and Borbála Zsuzsanna Török

Part I Negotiation of (Trans-)Imperial Patronage

1 Was Astronomy the Science of Empires? An Eighteenth-Century Debate in View of the Cases of Tycho and Galileo	25
Gábor Almási
2 The Jesuits' Negotiation of Science between France and China (1685–1722): Knowledge and Modes of Imperial Expansion	53
Catherine Jami
3 The Uses of Knowledge and the Symbolic Map of the Enlightened Monarchy of the Habsburgs: Maximilian Hell as Imperial and Royal Astronomer (1755–1792)	79
László Kontler

Part II Competition of Empires: A Motor of Change in Knowledge Acquisition and Authentication

4 Capitalizing Manuscripts, Confronting Empires: Anquetil-Duperron and the Economy of Oriental Knowledge in the Context of the Seven Years' War	109
Stéphane Van Damme
5 Contested Locations of Knowledge: The Malaspina Expedition along the Eastern Coast of Patagonia (1789)	129
Marcelo Fabián Figueroa

- 6 "To Round Out this Immense Country": The Circulation of Cartographic and Historiographical Knowledge between Brazil and Angola in the Eighteenth Century 153
Catarina Madeira-Santos

Part III Self-assertion of New Nodes of Knowledge Production

- 7 Mexico, an American Hub in the Making of European
China in the Seventeenth Century 181
Antonella Romano
- 8 Anthropology beyond Empires: Samuel Stanhope Smith
and the Reconfiguration of the Atlantic World 207
Silvia Sebastiani
- 9 Measuring the Strength of a State: Staatenkunde in Hungary around 1800 235
Borbála Zsuzsanna Török

- Index* 263