

Contents

1 Introduction	1
1.1 Why Study the Relationship Between Football and Europe?	2
1.2 Football in Europe: A Historical Perspective	5
1.3 Historical Studies of UEFA: State of Play	7
1.4 Studying the Creation of UEFA	10
1.5 Drawing on the 'Football Archives'	12
1.6 Structure of the Book	15
Part I The road to creating a governing body for European football. 1949–1953.
2 Reorganising European Football	21
2.1 A New Phase of the Europeanisation of the Game	21
2.2 New Ideas, New Leaders	27
2.3 A 'Little Council of Europe in Football'	37

3	Between Internationalism and Cold War	47
3.1	FIFA Facing the New World Order	48
3.2	Reorganisation: A Response to the New Challenge?	55
3.3	Facing the Claims of the Soviet Bloc	60
4	Following the South American Model	69
4.1	A 'Game' Between South Americans and Europeans	69
4.2	The 'Thommen Compromise' and the Opening Route to UEFA's Creation	82
Part II Unifying European Football 1954–1961
5	Energising European Football	93
5.1	UEFA: A New Body for European Football	94
5.2	Where Do UEFA's Borders Lie?	108
5.3	Creating Competitions for Clubs	114
5.4	The Difficult Road Towards a European Cup of Nations	124
6	Managing the Cold War and Building Europe	131
6.1	Managing the Cold War Context	132
6.2	Securing UEFA's Position	143
6.3	European Dialogue: UEFA-EBU Exchanges	149
6.4	An 'Atypical Actor' in European Cooperation	156
7	Becoming a Leading Continental Confederation	161
7.1	The Continentalisation of FIFA	161
7.2	Achieving Autonomy from FIFA	169
7.3	Inspiring the South Americans in Return	178
8	Conclusion	183
8.1	The Establishment of a European Football Confederation	184
8.2	UEFA's Consolidation during the 1960s	188

8.3 Further Researches on the Europeanisation of Football History	200
Sources	205
Chronology	209
Bibliography	215
Index	235