Preface	ix
Introduction	1
1. The Semiotics of Berzelian Chemical Formulas	9
The Various Meanings of Berzelian Formulas	14
Image and Language: The Syntax of Berzelian Formulas	23
2. Two Cultures of Organic Chemistry in the Nineteenth Century: A Structural Comparison	41
The Area of Research Objects in Early Nineteenth-Century Plant and Animal Chemistry	43
Plant and Animal Substances: A Cross between Natural History and Chemistry	49
The Classification of Plant and Animal Substances	52
“Nature” and “Art” in the Experimental Practice of Plant and Animal Chemistry	58
The Experimental Culture of Organic Chemistry after 1840	65
The Two Forms of Organic Chemistry Compared	75
3. Experiments on the Periphery of Plant Chemistry	86
Ether Production and Commercial Pharmacy	88
Interpretive Models of the Formation of Ordinary Ether around 1800	91
Quantitative Approaches in the Study of Organic Reactions	95
Simplified Quantitative Experiments	106
The Manufacture of an Artificial Oil in the Chemical Laboratory	108
New Attempts to Balance the Masses of Reacting Substances	111

The Overthrow of the Accepted Interpretive Model of the Formation of Ordinary Ether	115
4. Paper Tools for the Construction of Interpretive Models of Chemical Reactions	118
The Historical Problem	119
Modeling Separate Reaction Pathways	120
The Performative Function of Berzelian Formulas	126
5. Paper Tools for the Classification of Organic Substances	130
The Structure and Function of Dumas and Boullay's Table	134
Experimentation and the Construction of Formula Models for the "Compounds of Bicarbonated Hydrogen"	137
The Enlargement of Substance Classes by the Construction of Further Formula Models	141
Manipulations of Formulas and Their Significance	145
Reception of the New Classification among European Chemists	147
6. Paper Tools for Modeling the Constitution of Organic Compounds	149
The Shared Conceptual Preconditions for the Models of Constitution	151
Models of Constitution Prior to 1833	163
The Controversy	176
7. The Dialectic of Tools and Goals	188
A Performative Account of Conceptual Development	189
The Creation of Mutual Adjustments and Its Reflection in the New Mode of Justification	202
8. The Historical Transformation Process	207
Model Objects and Unintended Paradigmatic Achievements	208
The Structural Transformation	216
9. Paper Tools	231
Filling in the Gaps of Inscription Devices	233
Chains of Inscriptions and Paper Tools	240
Notes	249
Literature Cited	279
Index	299
