

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	1
Inventing a Tradition?	1
Images of Empire	10
Notes	16
1 The Fall of the Jesuits and the Crisis of the Colonialist Project	19
Tupi or Tapuia? From the Indigenous “Blank Slate” to the Second Fall	19
Emancipation, the Expulsion of the Jesuits, and the Indianist Epic	42
The Battle for Emancipation on the Uruguay	48
Caramuru , the Colonial Messiah, and the First Mestiço Marriage	58
Miracle on the Upper Amazon: A Muhraida and the Pacification of the Mura	66
Notes	74
2 Exiles of Empire: The Tragedy of Colonialism and the Romantic Indianist Utopia	79
Extermination or Integration? Independence, Civil Conflict, and Indian Policy after Pombal	79
The Rise of a Romantic Indianist Movement in Brazil	87

Compatriots and Comrades-in-Arms	94
Dramas of Racial Exclusion, Revenge, and Exile: Martins Pena, Teixeira e Sousa, and Gonçalves Dias	98
Conquest, Apocalypse, and the Sleeping Giant of History	111
The Return of the Exile and the Utopia of Integration	130
Notes	142
3 Slaves and Allies: The Conservative Mythology of Integration	147
The Politics of Conciliation and Indigenist Policy in the Second Reign	147
The Ideal Indian Slave	160
Rewriting the Indianist Epic: Alencar's Conservative Mythology of Conciliation	164
Slave, Rebel, and Ally: The Guarani Indian	180
Original Sin in the Brazilian Eden: The New Conservative Gospel of Iracema	193
Notes	208
4 The Savage Strikes Back	213
Shattering the Indianist Dream	213
The Return of the Rebel	223
The "Savage Hierarchy" of Empire	235
Daybreak in Colombia, Nightfall Across the Americas	239
Notes	241
Epilogue: The Indianist Legacy	245
Notes	249
Select Bibliography	251
Index	267