

Contents

Preface	page ix
Introduction	1
PART ONE HUMAN PERSONAL DEATH
1 Definitions of Death and What We Mean by Person	13
Introduction	13
Biological Death	17
So-called Personal Death	20
The Anthropological Challenge of Neocortical Death	31
Ethics as the Criterion for Defining Death	38
Diversity of Definitions of Death in a Secular Ethic	45
Conclusion	48
PART TWO THEORY OF KNOWLEDGE ABOUT DEATH
2 Scheler's Intuitive Knowledge of Mortality	51
Introduction	51
Modern Man's Attitude Towards Death Itself	53
The Certainty of Mortality Based on Observation and Induction or on Intuition	54
Problematic Questions Raised by Scheler's Thesis of an Intuitive Knowledge of Mortality	58
3 Heidegger's Being-Towards-Death	61
The Distinction Between Ontical and Ontological	62
The Impossibility of Experiencing My Own Death	64
The Death of Another as a Possible Object of Thanatological Knowledge	68
Being-Towards-Death	72
Critique	80
	vii

4	Is Mortality the Object of Foreknowledge?	85
5	Inductive Knowledge of Death and Jean-Paul Sartre	91
	The Realist and Idealist Concepts of Death	92
	The Expectation of My Death	95
	Death as Another's Victory	99
	Death as a Situation-limit	107
	Conclusion	109
6	Knowledge of Mortality Is Inseparable from the Relation to the Other	112
7	Death as the Object of Experience	117
	Mutual Exclusiveness of the States of Life and Death	122
	The Meaning of the Expression "My Death"	127
	Death in Life	131
	Love as the Unveiling of What Is Unthinkable about Death	139
	The Phenomenology of Death	140
PART THREE DOES DEATH MEAN NOTHING TO US?
8	The "Nothingness of Death": Epicurus and His Followers	151
	Presuppositions of the Epicurean Thesis of the "Nothingness of Death": Materialism, Hedonism, and Experientialism	151
	"Death Is Nothing to Us"	153
	The Ancients	155
	Modern Thinkers: Montaigne, Feuerbach, Schopenhauer, and Others	165
9	Discussion of Experientialism and the Need for a Subject	168
	The A Priori Character of the Epicurean Assertion that Death Is Nothing to Us	168
	First Series of Examples Against Experientialism:
	Comparisons Between Two States of Life	171
	Second Series of Examples Against Experientialism:
	Comparisons Between a State of Life and a State of Death	174
	Third Set of Possible Arguments Against Experientialism:
	Posthumous Evils	175
	The Subject of Posthumous Evils	177
10	Death: An Evil of Privation	182
	Of What Does Death Deprive the Subject?	184
	Is Death Always an Evil?	192
	Defense of the Characterization of Death as an Evil in View of the Peaceful State of Prenatal Nonexistence	206
	Conclusion	213
	Bibliography	221
	Index of Names	249
	Index of Concepts	255