

CONTENTS

|  |           |
|--|-----------|
| Acknowledgments   | ix |
| Introduction   | I         |
| SANDER VAN MAAS  |           |
| 1. The Auditory Re-Turn (The Point of Listening)   | 18        |
| PETER SZENDY   |           |
| 2. “Dear Listener . . .”: Music and the Invention of Subjectivity  | 30        |
| LAWRENCE KRAMER  |           |
| 3. Scenes of Devastation: Interpellation, Finite and Infinite  | 51        |
| SANDER VAN MAAS  |           |
| 4. Positive Feedback: Listening behind Hearing   | 70        |
| DAVID WILLS  |           |
| 5. “Antennas Have Long Since Invaded Our Brains”:Listening to the “Other Music” in Friedrich Kittler | 89        |
| MELLE JAN KROMHOUT   |           |
| 6. Movement at the Boundaries of Listening, Composition,and Performance                              | 105       |
| JASON FREEMAN  |           |
| 7. The Biopolitics of Noise: Kafka’s “Der Bau”   | 125       |
| ANTHONY CURTIS ADLER   |           |
| 8. Torture as an Instrument of Music   | 143       |
| JOHN T. HAMILTON   |           |
| 9. Stop It, I Like It! Embodiment, Masochism, and Listeningfor Traumatic Pleasure                    | 153       |
| ROBERT SHOLL   |           |
| 10. Sounds of Belonging: Accented Writing in Jean Rhys’s GoodMorning, Midnight               | 175       |
| LIEDEKE PLATE  |           |

|     |  |     |
|-----|--|-----|
| 11. | Back to the Beat: Silent Orality in Young Hae ChangHeavy Industries          | 192 |
|     | KIENE BRILLENBURG WURTH  |     |
| 12. | The Discovery of Slowness in Music   | 206 |
|     | ALEXANDER REHDING  |     |
| 13. | Negotiating Ecstasy: Electronic Dance Musicand the Temporary Autonomous Zone | 226 |
|     | ANDREW SHENTON   |     |
|     | Notes   | 245 |
|     | List of Contributors  | 305 |
|     | Index   | 309 |