

Contents

Preface . . . . .	xiii
Chapter 1. Customer Strategies in the Face of New Technological, Social and Environmental Challenges . . . .	1
Gilles N'GOALA
1.1. AI, robotization and algorithms: what are the effects on customers? . .	2
1.2. Business model renewal: what are the impacts on customers? . . . . .	6
1.3. Accountability to customers and citizens: why and how? . . . . .	8
1.4. Practicing open innovation with customers . . . . .	12
1.5. Customer relationship management in the face of societal and environmental challenges . . . . .	13
1.6. Conclusion . . . . .	17
1.7. Acknowledgements . . . . .	18
1.8. References . . . . .	19
Chapter 2. Brand Practices Faced with Augmented Consumers . . . . .	23
Nathalie FLECK and Laure AMBROISE
2.1. A more complex approach to the customer to follow them wherever they go . . . . .	24
2.1.1. Following the customer wherever they buy: from multichannel to omnichannel . . . . .	24
2.1.2. Communicating with the customer wherever they come into contact with the company: the touchpoints . . . . .	25
2.2. An evolution of message content . . . . .	27
2.2.1. A constant search for a demonstration of transparency. . . . .	27
2.2.2. Indirect speaking: the growing role of influencers . . . . .	30
2.3. A stronger involvement of consumers in brands . . . . .	31

2.3.1. Increasing consumer participation . . . . .	31
2.3.2. An increasingly personalized relationship . . . . .	34
2.3.3. A relationship based on utility and meaning through commitment. . . . .	35
2.4. Conclusion . . . . .	39
2.5. References . . . . .	39

Chapter 3. The Augmented Customer Relationship: the Increasing Importance of the Customer's Role . . . . . 41
Sylvie LLOSA and Lionel NICOD

3.1. The customer, a long-standing player in the relationship . . . . .	41
3.1.1. The customer, from the role of beneficiary to the role of relationship producer . . . . .	42
3.1.2. A role as a producer, a source of value for the company and the customer . . . . .	44
3.2. The digitization, development and diversification of the customers' roles . . . . .	45
3.2.1. An enrichment of intra-role roles through the development of technologies in the relationship . . . . .	46
3.2.2. An intensification and diversification of the customer's extra roles. . . . .	47
3.3. The consequences for the company. . . . .	50
3.3.1. Motivating customers to play a greater role . . . . .	50
3.3.2. Managing customer expertise. . . . .	52
3.3.3. Rethinking the role of staff in the customer journey to create greater value . . . . .	54
3.4. References . . . . .	55

Chapter 4. Innovation Augmented by the Customer: from Ideation to Diffusion . . . . . 59
Thomas RUSPIL, Cyrielle VELLERA and Andreas MUNZEL

4.1. Introduction: the new roles and contributions of the customer. . . . .	59
4.2. The role of the customer in the upstream phase of the launch of an innovation: the customer as a source of new ideas at the service of companies' innovation processes. . . . .	60
4.2.1. Toward customer participation in innovation . . . . .	60
4.2.2. Innovation by customers and users (user innovation): a major phenomenon? . . . . .	62
4.2.3. Co-innovating with customers and users: three possible strategies . . . . .	62
4.2.4. Co-innovating with companies: what do the main stakeholders think? . . . . .	65

4.3. The role of the customer downstream of an innovation launch: the customer influences to facilitate the adoption of the innovation on the market . . . . .	66
4.3.1. From the innovative customer to the influential customer . . . . .	66
4.3.2. Influence marketing: a new role for the customer? . . . . .	67
4.3.3. From OLs to e-OLs – who are they? . . . . .	68
4.3.4. Identifying and selecting leaders and e-OLs . . . . .	69
4.3.5. Relationship management with leaders and e-OLs . . . . .	70
4.4. Conclusion . . . . .	71
4.5. Acknowledgements . . . . .	72
4.6. References . . . . .	72

Chapter 5. The Customer's Voice: Toward New Listening Tools . . . . . 77

Andreas MUNZEL, Jessie PALLUD and Daria PLOTKINA

5.1. Introduction: “markets are conversations” . . . . .	77
5.2. The different forms of WOM . . . . .	78
5.3. Steps to managing the customer's voice over the Internet . . . . .	79
5.3.1. Step 1: set up listening measures . . . . .	79
5.3.2. Step 2: respond to online customers . . . . .	84
5.4. Current and future challenges . . . . .	88
5.4.1. Challenge 1: when the customer's voice is manipulated (the case of deceptive reviews) . . . . .	88
5.4.2. Challenge 2: when the internal customer – the employee – expresses himself online . . . . .	88
5.5. Conclusion . . . . .	89
5.6. References . . . . .	90

Chapter 6. Redesigning the Customer's Role in a Connected World . . . . . 95

Pauline FOLCHER, Sarah MUSSOL and Gilles N'GOALA

6.1. A connected customer with multiple faces . . . . .	97
6.1.1. The connected customer's fragmented identity . . . . .	97
6.1.2. Representations and performance of the connected customer . . . . .	99
6.2. Managing the customer in their connected environment . . . . .	103
6.2.1. Customer marketing, between secrecy and stealth . . . . .	103
6.2.2. The dark side of the IoT . . . . .	105
6.2.3. Toward the disappearance of the “customer” in a connected world? . . . . .	106
6.3. Connected customers, masters of their own consumption and relationship with brands . . . . .	107
6.3.1. Connection as a source of value creation for the individual . . . . .	108

6.3.2. Orchestration of connected objects and organization of services around the individual . . . . .	109
6.3.3. The individual in a connected environment: control or trust? . . . .	111
6.4. Conclusion . . . . .	113
6.5. References . . . . .	113
Chapter 7. The Augmented Customer Experience: Between Humanity and Robotization? . . . . .	117
Régine VANHEEMS
7.1. From experience to omnichannel experience . . . . .	118
7.1.1. Rethinking the experience when it becomes omnichannel . . . . .	118
7.1.2. From the integration of the Internet into the purchasing process to omnichannel: toward a sublimation of the customer experience? . . . . .	119
7.1.3. Creating an unforgettable memory souvenir because of the fluidity between “touchpoints” . . . . .	121
7.2. Management of the omnichannel system: between fluidity, continuity or disruption and jumping between “touchpoints”? . . . .	122
7.2.1. When the experience with a touchpoint is the continuity of an experience started elsewhere . . . . .	122
7.2.2. The TEAV model as a theoretical basis for the analysis of omnichannel trajectories . . . . .	125
7.2.3. The contents of the omnichannel experience approached in a holistic way . . . . .	126
7.2.4. An experience that is exacerbated when it is experienced over several channels? . . . . .	128
7.3. Conclusion: the place of the human being and technology to create a quality experience . . . . .	129
7.4. References . . . . .	131
Chapter 8. Designing Your Customer Experience. . . . .	133
Florence JACOB
8.1. Designing a new customer experience . . . . .	135
8.1.1. Step 1: analyzing past customer experiences. . . . .	135
8.1.2. Step 2: taking strategic prerequisites into account. . . . .	136
8.1.3. Step 3: prioritizing and determining the place for the desired experience. . . . .	136
8.1.4. Step 4: operationalizing the journeys that constitute the experience. . . . .	138
8.1.5. Step 5: checking the created journeys . . . . .	139
8.2. Designing customer journeys . . . . .	140

8.2.1. The classic graphic tools: blueprint and contact matrix . . . . .	140
8.2.2. Practicing design thinking by creating personas. . . . .	141
8.2.3. Interests and limitations of graphic tools . . . . .	143
8.3. Big data and design: the two necessary areas of expertise . . . . .	144
8.4. References . . . . .	145

Chapter 9. Customer Relationships and Digital Technologies:

What Place and Role for Sales Representatives? . . . . . 149

Eric JULIENNE, Maud DAMPERAT and Romain FRANCK

9.1. A new way of selling: social selling . . . . .	150
9.1.1. What is social selling? . . . . .	150
9.1.2. Meeting customers on their buying journey . . . . .	151
9.1.3. Adopting a sales approach focused on meeting needs . . . . .	151
9.1.4. Using social media at every stage of the sale. . . . .	153
9.1.5. Improving business performance. . . . .	154
9.1.6. Overcoming social media challenges . . . . .	155
9.2. The prospects of AI for the commercial sector . . . . .	157
9.2.1. The new strategic toolbox or the augmented salesperson . . . . .	158
9.2.2. Toward sales automation or sales without a salesperson. . . . .	162
9.2.3. New forms of sale or the humanoid robot-seller. . . . .	163
9.3. References . . . . .	164

Chapter 10. Engaging Reciprocity from the ### Complainant Customer in the Digital Age . . . . . 167

Françoise SIMON

10.1. Obtaining the complainant customer's voice: a multifaceted challenge . . . . .	167
10.1.1. Back to the Exit, Voice, Loyalty model . . . . .	168
10.1.2. When the customer's desire for discussion depends on the state of the relationship with the brand . . . . .	169
10.2. Understanding the complainant customer's levers of reciprocity . . .	171
10.2.1. The central role of perceived justice in shaping customer satisfaction . . . . .	171
10.2.2. The triggering of the customer's desire for reciprocity . . . . .	172
10.3. Differentiating the care of complainant customers . . . . .	175
10.3.1. Globalization and taking the intercultural factor into account . . .	175
10.3.2. Identifying the complainant customer's motivations on social networks . . . . .	176
10.3.3. The "love becomes hate" effect of the loyal customer . . . . .	176
10.3.4. The matrix of restorative actions . . . . .	177
10.4. Conclusion . . . . .	178
10.5. References. . . . .	179

Chapter 11. The Firm's Empathic Capacity: a Social Neuroscience Perspective for Managing Customer Engagement in the Digital Era . . . . .	183
Mathieu LAJANTE
11.1. Introduction: the dilemma of digital transformation in customer relationship management . . . . .	183
11.2. What social neuroscience tells us about empathy. . . . .	185
11.2.1. Social neuroscience: what is it? . . . . .	185
11.2.2. The emotional connection is essential to any social and commercial relationship. . . . .	186
11.2.3. Empathy: the epicenter of the emotional connection . . . . .	187
11.3. Developing firms' empathic capacity: a two-level strategy. . . . .	191
11.3.1. Sharing the customer's emotional states. . . . .	191
11.3.2. Understanding the customer's mental states . . . . .	194
11.3.3. How does the customer appraise their engagement with the firm? . . . . .	197
Chapter 12. Data Marketing for Customer Intimacy. . . . .	203
Grégoire BOTHOREL and Virginie PEZ-PÉRARD
12.1. Multiple customer data sources . . . . .	206
12.2. The different customer data hubs . . . . .	207
12.3. The difficult consolidation of customer data . . . . .	209
12.4. The intersection of media and data to serve customer strategy . . . . .	210
12.5. Leveraging data: market research in the era of customer data . . . . .	215
12.6. Data marketing... tomorrow . . . . .	217
12.7. References. . . . .	218
Chapter 13. The Dark Side of Customer Relationship Management Practices in the Data Age: Managing Resistance and Perceived Intrusion for Responsible Practices . . . . .	219
Caroline LANCELOT-MILTGEN, Aïda MIMOUNI CHAABANE and Virginie PEZ-PÉRARD
13.1. The dark side of customer relationship management practices . . . . .	220
13.2. Possible consumer feelings. . . . .	221
13.2.1. A sense of pressure . . . . .	221
13.2.2. A sense of injustice . . . . .	222
13.2.3. A sense of loss of control . . . . .	223
13.3. The consequences: consumers are showing signs of resistance . . . . .	224
13.3.1. Resistance: what are we talking about? . . . . .	224
13.3.2. Consumer resistance to the collection and use of personal data . . . . .	227
13.4. Solutions for effective and responsible practices . . . . .	230

13.4.1. Optimizing the execution of loyalty practices . . . . .	231
13.4.2. Monitoring effectiveness using customer-centric metrics . . . . .	231
13.4.3. Overseeing the implementation of “virtuous” practices. . . . .	232
13.4.4. Restoring confidence in the collection and use of data . . . . .	233
13.5. Acknowledgements . . . . .	237
13.6. References. . . . .	237

Chapter 14. The Legal Basis for a Data Economy Based on Trust . . . . . 241

Isabelle LANDREAU

14.1. Personal data at the heart of the DGMP . . . . .	242
14.1.1. Personal data: the black gold of the 21st Century . . . . .	242
14.1.2. Personal data and brands: the cyber-consumer chooses brands that respect confidentiality . . . . .	243
14.2. GDPR tools to restore trust. . . . .	243
14.2.1. Clear and explicit consent . . . . .	243
14.2.2. Ensuring the rights of the cyber-consumer over their personal data . . . . .	244
14.2.3. Creation of a Data Protection Officer role . . . . .	245
14.3. The future of our personal data . . . . .	245
14.3.1. A right of ownership over our personal data? . . . . .	245
14.3.2. The future: toward a right to an income on our data? . . . . .	249
14.4. Conclusion . . . . .	253
14.5. References. . . . .	254

Chapter 15. Information Systems Security: Challenges, Vulnerabilities and Tools . . . . . 257

Philippe COHARD

15.1. Current uses reinforcing the need for security: cryptocurrency and blockchains. . . . .	258
15.1.1. Blockchain principles. . . . .	258
15.1.2. Blockchain applications . . . . .	259
15.2. Protecting yourself from potential threats: safety and security . . . . .	261
15.3. Security in companies and organizations. . . . .	262
15.3.1. Vulnerabilities, risks and ISP . . . . .	262
15.3.2. Deterrence, neutralization and awareness – training. . . . .	263
15.4. The standards that govern safety: ISO/IEC 27000 . . . . .	265
15.5. Conclusion . . . . .	268
15.6. References. . . . .	269

Chapter 16. Organizing the Augmented Customer Relationship . . . . . 271

Isabelle PRIM-ALLAZ and Pierre VOLLE

16.1. Introduction . . . . .	271
16.2. Governance of customer strategy within the organization. . . . .	272

16.2.1. The value of having a Chief Customer Officer. . . . .	272
16.2.2. The CCO, the one man orchestra . . . . .	273
16.3. The role of the different stakeholders in customer relationship management . . . . .	274
16.3.1. The key role of employees. . . . .	274
16.3.2. Other stakeholders involved. . . . .	278
16.4. In-house contracting or outsourcing: who should implement customer relationship management? . . . . .	282
16.4.1. Managing customer relations internally . . . . .	282
16.4.2. Outsourcing customer relationship management. . . . .	283
16.5. Aligning the organization around the customer strategy. . . . .	285
16.6. References. . . . .	285
List of Authors . . . . .	289
Index . . . . .	293